

Benedikt Pötscher (University of Vienna)

Title: Model Selection and Inference, Parts 1 and 2

We discuss the effects of model selection on subsequent statistical inference. In particular, we study the distribution and mean-squared error of post-model-selection estimators as well as properties of standard inference procedures in the presence of model selection. We also discuss how these inference procedures need to be modified to properly account for the model selection step.